Mix, Lovett declares that his wife was addicted mildly to the morphine habit when he married her. He says she grew more and more a slave to the habit, until he sent her to Jacksonville for her health in the early part of 1903. On her return she again took up the habit, he alleges, and he sent her to a sanitarium in Philadelphia for treatment from Jan. 27, 1994, until April 14, 1865. He spreads upon the record a letter he alleges was written by his wife to Grant and which reads:

The located find lines I promised to send you. This is a case of better late than never, even if it be a case of of with the old and on with the new, with you. Please inclose this in your answer. CLARA JANE."

The inclosed lines were a newspaper clipping of a simmering love poem by Elia Wheeler Wilcox entitled "Forbidden Speech."
